In 1945, the end of the war was drawing near, and Japan, Germany and Italy were facing defeat by the Allied Forces, including the United States and Great Britain. All of Japan's major cities were under constant aerial bombardment. Large squadrons of heavy B-29 bombers repeatedly firebombed Tokyo, Yokohama, Osaka and Nagoya. Most of these cities became seas of fire as a result of these bombings. Upon impact, a typical fire bomb spread an intensely hot, burning oil-like substance over large areas, destroying everything it touched. At the time most, most Japanese houses were constructed entirely of wood, so they were easily ignited and quickly burned to the ground. Many houses were intentionally destroyed to make empty spaces to slow down the spread of fire throughout Japan. Meanwhile, scientists in the United States were creating a far more devastating bomb-the world's first atomic bomb. The first atomic bomb was developed in Los Alamos, New Mexico, and passed its first test on July 16, 1945. The U.S Army had already targeted a Japanese city for the first bombing. Hiroshima was the first choice, Kokura the second choice, and Nagasaki, the third. These cities were chosen because they were manufacturing centers of military equipment in the Japanese war effort. U.S. military leaders determined that a clear, cloudless day would be the most suitable for this mission. The atomic bomb which was dropped in Hiroshima produced a very large amount of radiation. Sadako's death, ten years after the Hiroshima bombing, was caused by radiation exposure. Radiation can't be seen, but it's like light; it penetrates and permeates everything and everyone that is near it. Once exposed to radiation, even a small degree of it, living things will begin to deteriorate and will eventually die. In some cases, radiation sickness progresses in the human body slowly over a long period of time. Such was the case for Sadako. Due to the severity of the radiation over Hiroshima and Nagasaki, it was believed by many scientists that no trees, grass, vegetation or human life would be able to live in these cities for a hundred years." . one thousand paper cranes takayuki ishii 9780440228431. summary sadako and the thousand paper cranes by eleanor. a thousand cranes play script for kids schools theatres. one thousand paper cranes danjiy wamppad. sadako and the thousand paper cranes. one thousand paper cranes by takayuki ishii 9780440228431. one thousand paper cranes another night of reading. one thousand paper cranes the story of sadako and the. one thousand paper cranes movie. sadako story hiroshima international school. sadako a story about children and world peace. evan rachel wood stars in hiroshima drama one thousand. one thousand origami cranes. sadako and the thousand paper cranes study guide. one thousand paper cranes imdb. one thousand paper cranes the story of sadako and the. independent films. one thousand paper cranes the story of sadako and the. hiroshima japanese joy. senbazuru one thousand cranes japanvisitor japan travel. one thousand paper cranes for peace the story of sadako. review sadako and the thousand paper cranes the true. one thousand paper cranes for peace the story of sadako. the true story of sadako sasaki one thousand paper cranes. one thousand paper cranes the story of sadako. one thousand paper cranes the story of sadako and the. a thousand cranes first stage. sadako and the thousand paper cranes free stories. the one thousand origami cranes of sadako teach peace now. sadako
